Confederazione italiana agricoltori
The Cia - Italian Farmers is one of the largest agricultural organizations in Europe and in Italy. Its origin is linked to the National Farmers’ Alliance constitution in 1955. Established in December 1977 as Confederazione Italiana Coltivatori (CIC), in 1992 it took the denomination of Confederazione Italiana Agricoltori (Cia) to sanction and promote the modern role of the farmer and his business. Cia represents more than 900,000 full members; farmers and agricultural business owners. Its national headquarters are in Rome and it boasts a strong presence throughout the country in around 5000 communes, with regional, provincial and area branches.

Cia is an autonomous, democratic and independent association which strongly believes in the central role of individual and associated agricultural holdings and promotes cultural, moral, civic and economic growth among farmers and all those working in the rural world. The organisation works to achieve equal opportunities between women and men in society and the economy, and promotes the inclusion of young people and generational renewal in agricultural businesses and systems.

Cia’s aims include: protecting and developing agricultural businesses, farmers and operators in the rural world and agriculture more generally; protecting farm income as well as farmer’s civic rights, dignity and right to run a business; strengthening the role of agriculture in the Italian economy, not only as a production sector, but as heritage for our land, environmental and cultural resources and landscape; improving the competitiveness of agricultural businesses on both European and international internal markers; developing and promoting the rural world; and convincing society of the cultural value of land, seeing it as a limited and non-renewable public good.

Cia carries out activities and initiatives in the fields of food quality, safety and education, environmental protection and promotion, agri-tourism, forestry, organic farming, alternative energy sources, and agricultural legislative publishing and information. Cia signs collective labour agreements and is represented in major institutional bodies at national, regional and provincial level.

It promotes the direct participation of agricultural organisations in international agricultural development policies with the aim of placing farmers at the heart of the agri-food system both locally and globally. With its NGO, AseS, Cia also carries out agricultural development projects in Latin America and Africa.

At international and European level, Cia is a member of COPA (Committee of Professional Agricultural Organisations in the EU) and the WFO (World Farmers Organisation).
